Police talk man out of jumping from bridge

An NYPD officer successfully talked down a man threatening to jump off the Verrazano Bridge yesterday. The man, who police described as "despondent" and in his 30s, was noticed at about 12:30 p.m. He spoke only Cantonese Chinese, and Officer Yi Huang, from the Fifth Precinct in Chinatown, was able to talk him down off the bridge at about 4:30 p.m.

Cat killers

A father and son have been indicted for beating their cat to death with a stick and then dumping the body on a street corner, city prosecutors charged yesterday. An eyewitness notified police after watching Jean Rog Murat, 60, and Robenson Murat, 29, allegedly kill the cat on July 12. If convicted on animal cruelty charges, the pair could face up to two years in jail, prosecutors said. METRO/JG

Bronx boy, 4, shot dead

KEVIN C. DOWNS/METRO

► Child was near basketball courts when gunfire rang out ► Died from single bullet to the head while on playground ► Two others injured

A 4-year-old boy was killed and two men were injured Sunday evening during a playground shootout in the Morrisania section of the Bronx.

The 4-year-old victim, Lloyd Morgan, was playing on the playground next to the Forest Houses basketball court — located within a public housing complex near the corner of East 165th Street and Tinton Avenue — when a stray bullet struck him in the head around 9:36 p.m., according to police and Bronx Assemblyman Eric A. Stevenson.

Lloyd was pronounced dead upon his arrival at nearby Lincoln Hospital.

A 27-year-old man was likewise transported to Lincoln Hospital with a gunshot wound to the abdomen, and a 21-year-old man went to St. Barnabas Hospital, where he was treated for a gunshot wound to the arm. Both men are listed in stable condition, police say.

The incident reportedly occurred following the "First Annual Ghetto Angels Basketball Tournament," which, in a cruel bit of irony, was part of a memorial for a girl stabbed to death in that neighborhood last year.

Neighbors at the apartment building where Lloyd lived erected a makeshift shrine to the murdered child, placing candles, teddy bears and a basketball out on the sidewalk yesterday.

"When he comes outside, they have him here on his bike or his ball," Lloyd's neighbor, Melody Nelson, told Metro, of the boy. "That's all he did was play."

She described Lloyd as well behaved, and said the boys par-

Youth shootings

Lloyd Morgan is at least the fourth New York City child under age 10 to be struck by stray gunfire this year. Here are the others, all of whom survived:

1 July 8: 3-year-old Isaiah Rivera was shot in the leg while playing in a sprinkler in Bedford-Stuyvesant, Brooklyn.

2 April 26: 9-year-old Dulce Cabrera was grazed in the foot by a bullet while walking home from church in East New York, Brooklyn.

3 Feb. 21: 8-year-old Armand Bigo was shot in the shoulder while buying potato chips at a bodega in the Soundview section of the Bronx.

"They're trying to hang in there," Nelson said, when asked how the parents were holding up. Police have not yet made any arrests.

Bloomberg once again makes gun control push

The slaying of Lloyd, along with the recent massacre in a Colorado movie theater, has prompted Mayor Michael Bloomberg and a number of other city officials to continue to speak out on gun violence.

"Four years old, life snuffed out," Bloomberg said yesterday at a press conference. "There's not a lot else to say. We all know the scourge of guns on our streets, and we have to get them off."

For at least the third time in two days, Bloomberg also publicly criticized Barack Obama and Mitt Romney for not standing up more forcibly against illegal guns and gun loopholes.

"During the next presidential term, there will be 48,000 Americans killed with illegal guns," the mayor said. "It seems to me not unreasonable that whoever wants to be president should tell us what they're going to do about it before we go to the ballot box." METRO/JG

Murder makes some rethink stop-and-frisk

Assemblyman Eric A. Stevenson, who represents the Bronx neighborhood where Lloyd was slain, was another politician to speak out yesterday, declaring that he would rethink his objections to the NYPD's controversial stop-and-frisk program.

"If stop-and-frisk can prevent these types of crimes, maybe we should have it," said Stevenson, who planned an anti-violence rally to take place at 5 p.m. yesterday at the Forest Houses basketball court where Lloyd was shot.

Nonetheless, a man who identified himself as Lloyd's godfather said he didn't think stop-and-frisk would have prevented the shootout.

"Stop-and-frisk is aimed at the wrong people," said the godfather, who declined to give his name.

"It's aimed at the regular people that are walking down the block, going to the store. I have been stopped several times, no weapons," he said.

"This is an easy battle to win, and nobody is going to stop it," Bloomberg predicted, speaking in front of an Alphabet City health clinic.

MIT study: JFK a hot spot for spreading of disease

John F. Kennedy airport is No. 1 — but not in a good way. A new study by Massachusetts Institute of Technology lists JFK as the most likely airport in the nation when it comes to spreading extremely contagious diseases like SARS or the H1N1 flu virus.

The study, released yesterday by MIT's Civil and Environmental Engineering Department, looked at how likely the 40 largest U.S. airports are to spread a contagious disease. Surprisingly, airports that handled the most daily flights did not fall highest on the list.

While Hartsfield-Jackson International Airport in Atlanta has the highest frequency of flights, JFK still tops the list in terms of risky disease-spreading factors. JFK is a high risk due to its connectivity to other airports worldwide, and its location in a large metropolitan area, the report found.

Honolulu International Airport in Hawaii is comparatively tiny, handling about a third as much traffic as JFK, but the airport still ranked third on MIT's list for disease-spreading capabilities. That's because of its connections to other large, well-connected cities, according to the report.

In addition to air and people traffic that flow through flying hubs each day, researchers also looked at geographical location and connectivity to determine how fast a disease originating in each airport's home city would spread over a period of 15 days.

MIT energy studies professor Ruben Juanes said the results could have huge implications for combating public health crises such as the 2009 H1N1 flu pandemic and the 2003 SARS outbreak.

► As an international hub, diseases could be spread through JFK quickly and efficiently, the report found.

Giffords recovery continues with trip to the Alps

Giffords, who still uses a she was shot in the head by a gunman in January 2011.

She rode the two-stage cable car to a station with spectacular views of Mont Blanc and other peaks in France, Italy and Switzerland. REUTERS

Romney backs minute of silence at Olympics to mark massacre of Israelis

LONDON. U.S. presidential candidate Mitt Romney said for the first time yesterday that he supports an official minute of silence at Friday's opening ceremony for the Olympic Games to honor Israeli athletes killed at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

Romney's move broke years of his own silence on the issue, including his time leading the Salt Lake City Olympics in 2002. During those Games, survivors of the slain Israelis called on the International Olympic Committee to observe a moment of silence to mark what was the 30th anniversary of the deaths in Munich. The IOC declined. REUTERS

Epic rebuilding lies ahead for Penn State

JOE ROBBINS/GETTY IMAGES

The governing body of U.S. college sports fined Penn State University $60 million and voided its football victories for the past 14 seasons in an unprecedented rebuke for the school's failure to stop coach Jerry Sandusky's sexual abuse of children.

NCAA President Mark Emmert said the school had put "hero worship and winning at all costs" ahead of integrity, honesty and responsibility.

Penn State was not given the so-called "death penalty" that could have suspended its football program but its punishment was very by many as potentially even worse in the long term.

The punishment, announced by the National College Athletic Association at a news conference in Indianapolis, was unprecedented for its swiftness and breadth. It was the latest blow to an institution still reeling from Sandusky's conviction last month on child molestation charges.

The case was another blotch on the diminishing legacy of Paterno, who until yesterday's action had held the record for victories among big-time U.S. college football coaches in a career that spanned more than 40 seasons. Paterno lost that status since the NCAA's punishment includes voiding the Nittany Lions' victories between 1998 and 2011.

Emmert said the NCAA chose not to levy the so-called "death penalty" because it would have harmed individuals with no role in the Sandusky scandal.

Apple sales pause as buyers await new iPhone model

NEW YORK. As iPhone fans await the release of a new model, they are delaying purchases and may cause Apple Inc. to post its slowest sales and profit growth in more than two years.

With a redesigned model probably arriving by October, analysts estimate that sales of iPhones — Apple's biggest source of revenue — slid in the fiscal third quarter from prior periods. While analysts predict that the next iPhone will be the best-selling smartphone yet from Cupertino, California-based Apple, the purchasing delays will probably weigh down results until the device hits stores. BLOOMBERG

Syria threatens chemical weapons against invasion

BEIRUTE. Syria acknowledged for the first time yesterday that it had chemical and biological weapons and said it could use them if foreign countries intervened.

International pressure on President Bashar al-Assad has escalated dramatically in the last week, alongside a rebel offensive in the two biggest cities and a bomb attack which killed four members of his inner circle in Damascus.

Defying Arab foreign ministers who offered Assad a "safe exit" if he stepped down, the Syrian leader has launched fierce counter-offensives, reflecting his determination to keep power as an uprising enters its most violent phase. REUTERS

Massacre suspect has first court appearance

ARAPAHOE COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE VIA GETTY IMAGES

► James Eagan Holmes was represented by a public defender during the brief hearing

The man accused of killing a dozen people in a Colorado movie theater during a showing of the new Batman film gave little away in his first court appearance yesterday, sitting silently in a red jailhouse jumpsuit with his hair dyed bright red.

James Eagan Holmes, 24, appeared groggy and emotionless during the hearing, looking ahead and occasionally closing his eyes. He was shackled at the wrists and ankles.

Members of the victim's families and others who were in the cinema looked on. McKayla Hicks was among them. She was seated in the movie theater next door to the one where the killings occurred when a bullet hit her chin.

"Once he walked into the room, it just made everything a lot harder," she told CNN.

"He just looks like a pathetic freak," she said. "I just want him put away forever."

Several times, when District Judge William Sylvester asked Holmes a question, one of his attorneys answered.

The former neuroscience student also left his apartment booby-trapped with explosives that police said could have destroyed the apartment complex. Police say they are still searching for a motive for the crime, which baffled fellow students and acquaintances. They described him as a quiet high-achiever whose past gave little inkling that anything was amiss.

Arapahoe County District Attorney Carol Chambers said she would consult with the victims and families of the dead before making a decision on seeking the death penalty. REUTERS/METRO

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All

Legitimate Written Offers

Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition.

The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction

Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

► We recognize that crazy twinkle in your eye, Miley.

Miley Cyrus standing very close by her man

Noticeably missing from Sunday night's Teen Choice Awards was teen queen Miley Cyrus, who won in the "Choice Hot-tie" and "Choice Fashion Icon" categories despite being a no-show.

Cyrus spent the evening in Philadelphia, where she's been hanging out as her fiancée, actor Liam Hemsworth, shoots "Paranoia." So why didn't she make a quick trip back to L.A.? It seems Cyrus might have a little paranoia of her own: She's reportedly not happy with the amount of time Hemsworth has been spending with his "Empire State" co-star, Emma Roberts.

"Not only did she tell Liam it had to stop, she even confronted Emma," a source tells Perez Hilton.com. "Miley more or less said, 'Hands off my man!' Emma couldn't care less what Miley thinks. She makes fun of Miley behind her back, saying she's just a washed-up tween star. Emma feels she has nothing to lose, so she's pushing it as far as she can with Liam."

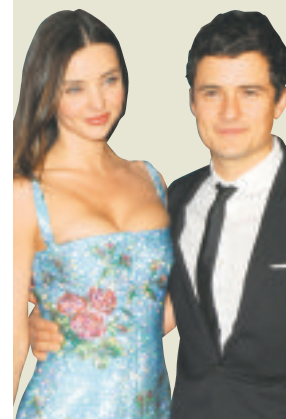

We like your spunk, Emma. But at this point, Miley's one pair of tattered pink sweatpants away from being a Philly girl — back away slowly, and keep your eyes on those acrylic nails.

Won't someone think of the beautiful children?

Miranda Kerr and Orlando Bloom have been spotted without their wedding rings on, prompting Famous magazine to report that their marriage "might be in trouble."

"She's had a lot on her plate — it could be that somewhere along the way her relationship with Orlando may have slipped between the cracks," says a source who has obviously never set eyes on Orlando Bloom.

A rep for the couple claims, naturally, that "there is absolutely no truth in the story."

Can't faze Charlize Theron

At this point in her career, Charlize Theron is a pro at getting her hands dirty on camera. When asked by W Magazine if death scenes or sex scenes are more difficult, the actress answered casually, "It depends on who you're doing the sex scene with. I don't have issues being naked. That sounds very slutty. What I mean is, I'm not hung up on my body."

Obviously, we're now playing the "Screw, marry, kill" game with her former onscreen partners. Our most difficult lineup: Johnny Depp, Michael Fassbender, Ben Affleck.

Talking points

Mariah Carey joins 'American Idol'

Kevin Reilly, Fox President of Entertainment, opened his executive session in front of journalists at the Television Critics Association press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., yesterday by confirming Mariah Carey will be a new judge on "American Idol." Reilly addressed the speculation head-on by saying, "I really can't confirm anything except for one thing: We closed a deal very, very recently." To prove just how recently the contract had been signed, Reilly pulled out his cell phone and began making a phone call while dropping hints as to who they signed. After a couple technical difficulties, Reilly addressed his caller: "Hi Mariah, how are you?" When put on speakerphone, Carey apologized for not being at the press tour in person, but assured critics she is "so excited to be on 'Idol'" and "can't wait to get started."

► Kelly

Minka Kelly sex tape being shopped

Minka Kelly is the latest actress to be plagued by a possible sex tape scandal, as a 30-minute tape of Kelly getting intimate with an ex-boyfriend is reportedly being offered to the highest bidder, according to TMZ. The video is said to be shot in a semi-professional manner, and the website claims that it's clear Kelly knows she's being filmed. Some question if Kelly is actually of age in the video, as she is reportedly seen singing along with and dancing to two songs from Brandy's "Never Say Never" album, which was released 16 days before the actress' 18th birthday.

Take it off, Diaz!

Cameron Diaz isn't going to let a little rain ruin a good time. The actress reportedly got drenched on her way to a party at New York's Chelsea Market last week, according to People magazine. Undaunted, Diaz "took her shirt off at one point to wring out her drenched top," a source says.

Best of the 2012 Teen Choice Awards

1 Zoe Saldana won the award for Best Actress in an Action Film ("Colombiana") but we think she deserved something for these shoes, too.

2 Portia de Rossi, Justin Bieber and Ellen DeGeneres sported slightly different versions of tussled blonde hair.

3 Zac Efron played it cool while accepting the surf board for "Choice Actor."

4 Carly Rae Jepsen closed out the night with a performance of her ubiquitous hit, "Call Me Maybe."

5 The Kardashians deployed teenage weapons Kendall and Kylie Jenner for the evening.

6 Gwen Stefani performed with her band No Doubt, ensuring that a whole new generation of teenage girls will grow up desperately wanting to be her.

PBS at TCA: Day 2

The power (and vanity) of celebrity

► Meg Ryan talks oppression ► Mr. Rogers returns, in a way ► David Geffen doesn't think song is about him

Nostalgia kicked off the second day of the Television Critics Press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., on Sunday, when PBS presented a panel for "Daniel Tiger's Neighborhood," the first TV series from The Fred Rogers Company since the beloved "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood."

Daniel Tiger is the sweater-wearing 4-year-old son of Daniel Stripe Tiger, Fred Rogers' first puppet from the original series. In the new animated series, the residents of the Neighborhood of Make-Believe are all grown up with kids of their own, who learn lessons on developmental issues (think: separation anxiety, disappointment and bedtime routines).

"This is designed to be your first television experience as a very young child. It carries the legacy of Fred Rogers in so many ways, but it's not necessary to enjoy this to know anything about Fred and his Neighborhood of Make-Believe," said executive producer

Kevin Morrison.

At the same time, parents who grew up calling Mr. Rogers their neighbor will be happy to know "there's little nods of love throughout the episodes," explains executive producer Angela Santomero. "If you are a big fan of Fred like I was, you'll see his little red sweaters."

Inspiring tales of human resolution set the stage for "Half the Sky," the documentary based on the best-selling book by Nicholas Kristof and Sheryl WuDunn about oppression of women and girls. Also on the panel were actresses Meg Ryan, Diane Lane and America Ferrera, who traveled with the journalists to help tell the stories of those around the world fighting for women's rights.

Maro Chermayeff, executive producer and director of "Half the Sky," said celebrities were brought into the project to "help the audience find a way in" to the upsetting stories of trafficking and mutilation. "If you give people a chance and you find some new ways for them to come to some of the subject matter, they will come and they'll respond," she said.

Ryan said while the spotlight is shining on a celebrity, "you can just saddle up next to something smart and important and that will get some attention."

Speaking of celebrity: Star-making legend David Geffen sat on a panel for the "American Experience" film documenting his career in music and film, "Inventing David Geffen." He'd been flown in from Sardinia for the event, and seemed in a hurry to get back — his answers to critics' questions were short and not very quotable. Not until he was asked about the Carly Simon song "You're So Vain," that is, and how he had been fingered as the subject of the tune.

"No, no. That's simply not true," he said. "Not to say I'm not vain, but I'm not her vain."

Finding a place where you belong

► In Emily Giffin's latest novel, 'Where We Belong,' the main character gets a blast from the past ► Just don't limit the book to being chick lit

When it is OK to keep a secret from the people closest to you? In her latest novel, "Where We Belong," Emily Giffin explores what happens when deep secrets are ultimately revealed.

Just as in her previous novels "Something Borrowed" and "Baby Proof," Giffin's latest focuses on a relationships in a trying time. In this case, it's the story of Marian Caldwell, a successful television producer living in New York who is forced to face her past when 18-year-old Kirby Rose shows up at her doorstep. We spoke to Giffin about her strong female characters and her feelings about chick lit.

This is your only novel that is told from the perspective of a teenager. Did this present a challenge for you while writing?

It was difficult at first to find Kirby's voice, but once I did, it was really quite easy for me to tell her story. In some ways, I could relate to her more than the adults in the book. She was my favorite character.

I recently read an interview in which you said you've never liked being classified under the term "chick lit." How would you describe your work instead?

It's not that I don't like the moniker — and I'm in favor of any label that encourages people to read or helps them find the kind of books they will enjoy. It's just that I don't think it's entirely accurate, especially for my last few novels. There is nothing about "Heart of the Matter" or "Where We Belong" that conjures chick lit. They are more straight women's fiction — books about exploring relationships and complicated emotional terrain — and frankly I think men would really enjoy them if they can get beyond the pretty covers. I am very fair to my male characters and try to make them as realistic as my female characters. And there is no man-bashing in my books.

What's next for you?

I'm gearing up for my book launch and tour that begins on July 24. It's one of the things I love about my career. There are whole months and zones of almost solitary confinement when I'm writing. Then I get to emerge and work with my publicity team, interact with the media and, most important, meet my readers. When the dust settles in early September, I will begin my next novel. I'm also in talks to turn "Where We Belong" into a television show. I just hope they find someone really hot to play Conrad. I'm sort of obsessed with him!

A+ studying and test-taking tips

► You can lend a hand on homework — but make sure your child is grasping the lesson.

Back to school

Your children's homework and tests help prepare them for the world outside of school. For now, though, good grades are the goal. Boston-based pediatrician Dr. Claudia Gold, author of "Keeping Your Child in Mind: Overcoming Defiance, Tantrums, and Other Everyday Behavior Problems by Seeing the World through Your Child's Eyes," provides tips to help you guide the students in your life through their academic pursuits.

► School will be in session before you know it ► How you can help your child succeed in the classroom

Homework

► Create a schedule conducive to success. "For some, it works best if they do [homework] right away. Others need a break for physical activity or relaxation. In general, children should have control over when they do their homework in a way that is developmentally appropriate."

► Don't take over your child's assignments. "Most of the problems that occur involve conflict between the parent and the child."

► Refuel right before tackling assignments. "Fruit, cereal or a sandwich are good choices."

Time management

► Allow for breaks. "Some kids, particularly those with problems of self-regulation, may need to take regular breaks from homework and studying to engage in calming self-regulating activities such as walking, running, art or music."

► Be reasonable. Keep in mind

Test-taking

► Have them prepare to adapt.

"In general, kids do not have control over the environment and the way tests are given, and they need to learn how to accommodate. If the kid does have attention problems or does have particular issues, there need to be accommodations in place for that child."

► Prep their bodies. "Getting sufficient sleep and having nutritious food are good preparations for a test."

that all students learn at different rates so some may need more time than others. "Time management has to be tailored to the characteristics of the child. It has to be individualized to the child's particular needs."

Studying

► Limit Internet capabilities if needed. "At some schools, they turn off access to Facebook during study hall hours. Something like that is useful around studying."

► Let failures be a learning experience. "In terms of letting kids take charge, middle school is a really good place to follow that rule. Then you can see what the problems are and you can fix them before they get to high school."

Distraction — or something more? All about ADHD

We checked in with Dr. Andrew Adesman, who heads the Developmental and Behavioral Pediatrics department of Children's Medical Center in New Hyde Park, N.Y., to give us the lowdown on attention disorders and those oft-used acronyms, ADD and ADHD.

What's the difference between ADD and ADHD?

There's a confusing tendency to refer to non-hyperactive attention deficit disorder as ADD to differentiate it from the type that also includes hyperactivity. But really ADHD is the umbrella term for the entire disorder. What are treatment options? Treatment is mostly about intervention and management: intervention in the classroom and home settings, and also medical intervention and management of behavior and actions. At home, the parent and a psychologist work together to educate the parent on how to form effective positive consequences for good behavior and negative ones for bad. The child has to be motivated to adapt [his or her] behavior. Medication is tricky. Some see it as a last resort and others see it as part of an initial treatment plan.

Are there any new treatments

people are talking about?

The essential fatty acids and fish oils seem to be somewhat effective. But it might not be sufficient. Neurofeedback or EEG biofeedback is a controversial treatment because it's expensive and the research is mixed. But it does seem to work and there are those who advocate it as effective.

Q&A

How can you tell if a child is just a normal, bouncy kid or if he or she has ADHD?

► Diagnosis is a challenge. Children with ADHD don't differ that much from children who don't have it, [except in] the severity and frequency of being distracted. If it's significant and ... interfering with a child's function, then it's likely ADHD. If a child is struggling in school it can be ADD, but it isn't always. There are no blood tests, no neurological tests. We're relying on clinical history from families and teachers. Diagnosis needs to be a careful study of the child and the overall situation.

Is fallen statue the end of the story?

While I agree with the decision not to leave the Joe Paterno sculpture as it was, they could do something more creative to remember the victims of his negligence. I propose keeping the sculpture but commissioning an addition: the figure of an abused child lying at his feet. That way, he'd now be portrayed leading his team forward while looking straight ahead — and ignoring what's right under his nose.

ERIC HAMELL, VIA E-MAIL

The outrage about the Penn State scandal is well deserved. Those who applaud the penalties placed on the university are correct in doing so. Those who still praise Paterno are the problem in our world, putting sports above human dignity and putting obscene profits above the suffering of children. But this scandal pales in comparison to the abuse hidden by the Catholic church. "Dealing" with it internally? Disgraceful! Too many people pay more attention to the Super Bowl, World Series, etc. than to what really matters: human suffering.

ROBERT LA ROSA, WHITESTONE, N.Y.

You mean to tell me that in 25 years, nobody in the NCAA ever heard anything about Jerry Sandusky being a pedophile — that he was using his foundation to get close to young boys? As far as I'm concerned, they're all part of the same protective network; and yet the NCAA gets to act like one of the victims here — the innocent bearers of justice and punishment. Don't be fooled — they all knew. This show is the PR of damage control. This is what happens when you let a stupid institution like football become all-powerful.

MICHAEL CHIMENTI,
OAKLAND GARDENS, N.Y.

Hindsight aids new outlook on old act

Mr. Gottlieb, in a nutshell the repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act allowed major banks to use huge funds, previously forced to be kept in safe low-risk, low-return investments, for investing in far riskier securities. In the late '90s, such liberation was hailed as a positive move, though in the hindsight it proved to be reckless. If that was not deregulation, I don't know what is. I'm also questioning Metro's publishing Mr. Gottlieb's letter of more than 200 words, more than double the limit. Is there a "slight" chance of a bias here? Would you publish a pro-Bush letter of a comparable length?

GAROLD MINKIN, NEW YORK

Disarming gun control argument is short-sighted

Following the senseless Aurora massacre, I heard someone dismiss the renewed demands for more gun control by positing that had the madman not been able to access the weapons he used, he would have found some other method of committing his crimes. I fear this is a rationalization too many use. It is akin to saying that removing small objects around an infant is pointless because the child will just find something else to choke on. # Make your own sequel

► Yes, 'On Golden Pond' was about old folks and came out before most of our readers were even born ► But the region where it was based and filmed has a beauty that's worth revisiting

It's been more than 30 years since the movie "On Golden Pond" revealed the natural beauty of New Hampshire's Squam Lakes to a worldwide audience. Truth is, it's even more wonderful in real life.

Boating

Squam Lakes comprises Little and Big Squam, which are dotted by a number of islands and coves providing sanctuary for those famous loons and other wildlife, including bald eagles. # Meet the elite street meat cities

Wherever you go on vacation this summer, there will be street food. In many countries, that doesn't mean a hot dog on a bun, but a delicious celebration of culinary heritage. In honor of those mouth-watering meals abroad, the members and editors of Virtualtourist.com have compiled a list of the "Top Ten Best Street Food Cities."

Singapore

The undisputed up-and-coming spot for street food in Southeast Asia is Singapore, though street food already has a long history in the city. In the 1950s and '60s, "street hawking" was an incredibly popular trade; however, the abundance of street hawkers eventually created sanitation issues. In 1968 and 1969, all street hawkers were forced to register, and for the next 15 years the government relocated hawkers to "hawker centers." These centers can be described as a hybrid of a food court and an organized market. Singapore's cuisine is reflective of its interesting position in Southeast Asia. The city's specialties in-

► A street vendor prepares food for sale in Bangkok, Thailand.

Bangkok, Thailand

Few places in the world, if any, are as synonymous with street food as Thailand. For the variety of locations and abundance of options, we selected Bangkok as our No. 1 spot for street food. Bangkok is notable for both its variety of offerings and the city's abundance of street hawkers. VirtualTourist members recommended Soi Rambuttri, a U-shaped lane off of Khao San Road and near Wat Chana Songkhram, as a great spot in the old district. Green Papaya salad bruised on a stone pestle, mango sticky rice, pad Thai (stir-fried noodles with egg, fish sauce, tamarind juice, red chili pepper and a combination of meat, garnished with crushed peanuts and lime), and chicken with green curry are all some of the Thai specialties our members mentioned finding in Bangkok.

clude Hainanese Chicken Rice, comprised of steamed chicken with a jelly-like layer with rice, cucumbers, chilies and pounded ginger; chili crabs, which come slathered in a garlicky and fiery paste; laksa, a spicy Peranakan (Chinese and Malaysian) noodle soup; and satay, skewers of marinated meats served with a peanut sauce.

Penang, Malaysia

One of the surprising aspects in researching this article was members' overwhelming enthusiasm for Penang, a small state and island on the north-west coast of Peninsular Malaysia. Members credited the three large ethnic groups in Penang (Malay, Chinese and Indian) as creating both a great variety in the street food, but also a multicultural influence on the cuisine as a whole. One member even stated he had better Indian food in Malaysia than he had in India! Char koay teow (stir-fried rice noodles), Assam laksa (a tart, hot and sour fish soup), roti (Indian-influenced flatbread) and satays of beef, chicken or even pork are all suggested.

Best family beaches on the East Coast

SPENCER PLATT/GETTY IMAGES

► We rounded up the top beaches on the East Coast for families ► Whether you've got older kids or little ones — or you're seeking a little calm, these are spots to hit

Old Silver Beach

North Falmouth, Massachusetts

Great for small kids, Old Silver Beach has warm waters, soft sand and a sandbar at low tide that creates pools for little ones to explore. It also has lifeguards, restrooms, showers and a snack bar not far from where you'd put your towels down. It's a smaller beach, so it can get crowded on nice days, but it's worth the trip anyway.

Insider tip: There's a $20 parking fee for visitors, but if you plan to park, go early — the beach is so popular that during the summer, the lot fills up quickly.

Virginia Beach

Virginia

With lots of on-the-water and nearby activities, Virginia Beach is great for the whole family. It offers 28 miles of public beach, a popular three-mile boardwalk and events almost every weekend on the boardwalk and surrounding areas, including the Boardwalk Art Show, East Coast Surfing Championship and Rock 'n' Roll Half-Marathon.

Insider tip: Nearby First Landing State Park features trails for hiking and biking, camp sites, swimming and sports rental equipment.

Corolla Beach

North Carolina's Outer Banks

The draws for families to Corolla Beach are many. Think of smooth-sand beaches, nearby lighthouses, water sports (like Jet Skis and kayak tours) and the chance to spot beautiful, wild horses that sometimes take trips along the beach. It's considered one of the Outer Banks' best undiscovered beaches.

Insider tip: Take the family on an adventure with Beach Jeeps of Corolla. They offer Wild Horse Sightseeing tours, as well as both guided and self-driven tours in Jeeps, 4x4s and Escalades.

► Hey, Southampton! Fodor's thinks you're great!

Coopers Beach

Southampton, New York

With warm waters and seven miles of dune-backed sands, Coopers Beach offers an amazing view of the Atlantic Ocean and historic mansions that line the shore, white sand and clear blue water, plus fantastic photo opps. Keep in mind that parking is pricey ($40 per day) and the small lot can fill up quickly, so get there before noon.

Insider tip: For even more fun, join in the family "Build a Sandcastle to the Stars" event over Labor Day Weekend. The contest is for all ages, but it has kid-focused prizes donated by businesses.

▶ Otah

Jets trade for offensive tackle Otah

Anyone afraid the Jets would enter training camp with Wayne Hunter as their starting right tackle may finally be able to rest easy.

The Jets announced yesterday they traded for Panthers offensive tackle Jeff Otah for an undisclosed draft pick. Otah has regularly played the right tackle position, but it seems likely he would move to the opposite end from D'Brickshaw Ferguson and man the position Hunter did last season.

Otah was a first-round pick out of Pittsburgh in 2008 and had started 29 games with Carolina. He missed all of 2010 and all but four games last season with knee injuries.

He is expected to be ready for training camp this week. ● METRO

RICH GET RICHER

► Rangers trade for five-time All-Star Rick Nash ► Defending conference points leaders add offensive weapon ► Dubinsky, Anisimov gone in deal

The saga is over. Rick Nash is a Ranger.

General manager Glen Sather acquired Nash, a third-round pick and minor league defenseman Steven Delisle from Columbus for Brandon Dubinsky, Artem Anisimov, Tim Erixon and a 2013 first-round pick yesterday.

"He'll help us immensely," Sather said in a late afternoon conference call. "This quality hockey player doesn't come along very often. [It was a] deal we couldn't turn down."

The left wing has scored 289 goals in 674 NHL games, including a high of 41 in 2003-04. He adds elite-level goal scoring to a team that struggled to score in the playoffs. The lack of offense was exposed in the six-game series loss to the Devils in the Eastern Conference final.

"Sometimes when you think it's a really good piece, but he doesn't exactly fit in all the little things you do, you can teach him those things if he really brings you something else," head coach John Tortorella said on breakup day when asked about the Rangers' need to add skill. "We [had] to work extremely hard to score goals."

Sather believes Nash will fit

ANDY DEVLIN/NHL/GETTY IMAGES

► Even with the acquisition of Nash, the Rangers are $13.391 million under the cap. It's not out of the realm of possibility they could add another high-end player.

Nash's bio

Nash has a laundry list of accomplishments:

- All-Star: 2004, 2007-09, 2011
- Gold Medal (2010 Olympics)
- Led NHL in goals (2004)

in seamlessly.

"[Nash] has a track record of being an excellent hockey player. Everyone in our organization was after this guy," Sather said, adding: "Nash doesn't break up the core of the hockey club."

The 28-year-old Nash is signed through the 2017-18 season with a $7.8 million cap hit. His contract includes a no-movement clause that expires following the 2014-15 season, and a no-trade clause that concludes at the end of the 2017-18 season.

Mets' Harvey joins club, grabs spotlight

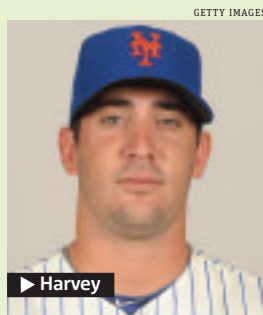

The Mets are reeling, their starting pitching staff is in shambles and up comes super prospect Matt Harvey from Triple-A. No pressure.

Harvey officially arrived in Queens yesterday, though he won't be activated until today. The Groton, Conn., native will start on Thursday at the Diamond-backs.

The Mets, to no one's surprise, are already trying to downplay the MLB debut of their top pick in the 2010 draft.

"We know there are going to be some growing pains," manager Terry Collins told reporters before Monday's game against the Nationals, "so we're ready to work through that and make sure he gets better."

Harvey struggled in his last Triple-A start, allowing six runs in five innings, but there was no question Harvey was the best available option with Dillon Gee and Johan Santana both on the DL. Gee is out for the season.

"We had a game yesterday and I went home and was getting ready to go hang out with my parents," Harvey said. "And [Buffalo manager] Wally [Backman] called. I was pretty much getting ready to lay down for a while. As soon as he told me I popped right out of bed and called my parents. And obviously they were extremely excited."

Harvey's father was his high school coach. ● METRO

Yankees add Ichiro

► New York pulls trade for future Hall of Famer out of nowhere ► Suzuki not nearly the star he once was ► Team hopes he's revitalized in new city

The Yankees may not have gotten much better, but they certainly got a huge jolt of star power yesterday afternoon.

YES Network's Jack Curry broke the news that the Yankees acquired Japanese and MLB legend Ichiro Suzuki of the Mariners just a few hours before the two teams were scheduled to face off in Seattle. The team confirmed the deal soon after.

The Yankees will send pitchers D.J. Mitchell and Danny Farnham in return for the outfielder. New York will also receive cash considerations as Ichiro is making $17 million this season. Curry reports the Yankees will pay about $2.2 million of the remaining money. He'll be a free agent after this season.

"I am overcome with feelings when I think of the times I spent with the fans here," Suzuki told Mariners reporters through a translator.

Ichiro is a 10-time All-Star — he made the team every year in the majors except for the last two — but he is struggling this year. He is batting just .261 with a .288 on-base percentage and 49 runs scored. He finished last year batting .272, far and away the lowest of his MLB career and the only time he's batted under .300. ● METRO

Reactions

Ichiro isn't the same player, but he still generates buzz:

► "We feel that he brings the speed element, a tremendous hitter," manager Joe Girardi said. "This is a big day." ► "I'd like to have a new number and make that my own," Ichiro on no longer wearing Bernie Williams's No. 51 ► "He deserves a chance to play for a contending team before the end of his career," Mariners CEO Howard Lincoln ► "You never know what's going to happen around here," Derek Jeter said. ► "I am going from a team with the most losses to a team with the most wins, so I am not able to contain my excitement," Ichiro said.
